NORWICH BULLETIN, THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910

GRECIAN MINISTER TAKES BRIDE Marriage of L. A. Coromilas and Miss Anna E. Cockrell at Home of Bride's Sister—Honeymoon Trip to Europe.

The marriage of Miss Anna Ewing Cockrell, daughter of former Senator Francis M. Cockrell of Washington, and L. A. Coromilas, the Greek minister at Washington, was solemnized at 4 p. m., Wednesday, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs.
Edison E. Gallaudeau, No. 270 Broadway in this city. Only members of the family and a few intimate friends were present, the wedding being quiet because of the recent death of the groom's mother.

The rooms were attractive with roses and lilacs, the marriage ceremony took place in the drawing room at which a altar which had been erected and which was a mass of lilacs and roses with palms banded high on either side. The decorations in this room entirely of white lilacs. In the dining room quantities of Dorothy Perkins roses (pink) were used; the hall, library and reception room being done in red and white.

The bride was given away by her father, and the ceremony was according to the Greek church service. Rev.
Joachim Alexopoulos, the Greek priest at Washington, officiating. There were no attendants except the groom's best man, Mr. Sinadinos of Boston.

A string orchestra played the wedding march from Lehengrin and furnished delightful music following the ceremony.

The bride's gown was of white chif-fon over very soft white satin, the corset was almost entirely of lace veiled with the chifon, and the high draped skirt was embroidered in seed pearls. The full veil was held by strands of seed pearls and orange blossoms, and the bouquet was a death of lilacs.

Covers were laid for thirty at the wedding breakfast which followed the ceremony, red ramburs being on the table.

Many magnificent gifts were received by the bride including jewels, cut glass, silver and gold. A superb silver service including candelabra, candlesticks and other pieces was presented by the Pan Hellenic association, an organization among the Greeks here, which was organized by Mr.
Coromilas.

At 6:30 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Coromilas left for their honeymoon trip to Europe. The bride's father, Mr. Gallaudeau, will be brief in this country.

At New London the 8:25 express was taken for New York. Mr. Coromilas has had a delightful social career as a Washington belle, but has not been there for the last year. Her home in Washington required the climate of her Missouri home, where she spent last winter.
Lately she came to her sister's home here, where her wedding took place.

Mr. Coromilas, counted as one of the handsomest men in the diplomatic corps, was prominent among the bacdior hosts of the past winter. Recently, by the death of his mother, he has been in mourning, and it is for this reason that the wedding was a quiet one.

Minister Coromilas will take his bride to Europe, sailing July 9. He has lately been granted a six-month leave of absence from his post at Washington, which he and his bride will spend in their honeymoon trip to make a stay in London before going on the continent. They will then go to Athens where the bride will meet her new relatives and view her new country.

On the continent they will stop at Paris and Constantinople before going to Athens. Just where Mr. Coromilas will be assigned for his next post is not known, it being possible that he will have some post on the continent but that will be decided later.

Mr. Coromilas spoke for a few minutes to his fellow-countrymen, urging them to their best efforts, but reminding them that they should not forget their country. He spoke in an interesting way to them and was loudly applauded. Rev. Alexopoulos also spoke, while A. Sinadinos of Boston was introduced and made a few remarks.
A. Voulas, secretary of the Greek legation at Washington, was also in attendance and spoke. He will take up the work of the legation until the return or another appointment is made.

Bad Advice to Lucy.
"Up, up, Lucy," the rhyme urges:
"The sun is in the sky." But what is the connection? Why should the more fact that it is past sunrise be used to prevent Lucy's getting her proper amount of sleep? It isn't necessarily a virtue to be up with the lark—or at the time the alkyard would be up if he lived in the United States and not in the land of nod. It is a shorter your days, Sidney," his aunt is said to have complained to Sidney Smith when he found him in bed at 10 in the morning after he had stayed up till 2. "But by the same token," Sidney is said to have retorted, "you have to get up early in the morning to be able to get up early in the morning."

On the popular notion that summer is the time for early rising has been founded the National Daylight association, which has the object of getting the clock ahead an hour for the summer months. There seems to be an impression that people will be happier if they can begin their work before the day gets hot. A fallacy. These summer mornings were made for sleeping. It's really harder to get up early in summer than in winter.

Nobody wants to go to bed early on a hot night. By 10 or 11 o'clock it is just beginning to be comfortable out on the porch. Evidently the thing for a sensible person to do is to sit outside then for an hour or so if possible to get cooled off. The early part of a summer night is not so much for sleeping. The most refreshing sleep comes in the cool of the early morning.—

As Platt Tells It.
The late Senator Thomas F. Platt's remotest ancestor in the family relates the story of his ancestor's resignation.
The significant sentence in this story is: "I finally induced Conkling on May 14 to join me in offering our joint resignation." This, of course, makes Conkling the hero of this episode. Mr.
Platt has given this view of the matter before, but never until Mr.
Conkling was dead. He represents Conkling as having his purpose to resign, after he had pumped his in-confidence to do so straight into the haughty face of the big man. He says that Conkling said to him "Young man, do not be too hasty about this matter." There are many versions of the story, but Mr. Platt's is the most consistent and the story, as he tells it, is not inconsistent with a comparative view of his nature and Conkling's.—Waterbury American.

terest of public health.
